Here's the often used shoelace riddle that still gets a player to this day. It's very cool that Jarome Iginla is now captain of the Flames. And it's even cooler he's the first black NHL captain. But am I the only worried that it's too much responsibility for the fragile Iginla? He puts everything on his shoulders as it is. Should the Flames really be giving him more responsibility? By the way. I love the front page of the Sun,new nike nfl, with Iginla's stick on fire. I think it might be symbolic.
