

Dr. Sean Lyons

Professor of Organizational Behaviour at the University of Guelph

Dr. Sean Lyons is a professor of Organizational Behaviour in the College of Management and Economics at the University of Guelph. Dr. Lyons's main area of research concerns inter-generational differences and their impacts on workplace dynamics and managing people. His research on generational differences in work values and attitudes has been featured in a number of newspapers, including the Globe & Mail's Report on Business, the National Post, the Ottawa Citizen, as well as on the Business News Network and CBC Radio. Dr. Lyons works frequently with private and public sector organizations to identify and address inter-generational issues. He is currently working on national study concerning the values, attitudes and career expectations of young people entering the labour market.